IELTS WRITING2017년 12월 2일 문제

In the modern world, schools are no longer necessary because there is so much information available through the internet that children can study just as well at home. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

IELTS WRITING

Agree – schools will no longer be needed in the modern world due to a huge amount of information on the internet

1) Internet is becoming more significant source of gathering information

- with the advent of internet, many previous sources such as books are being replaced.

IELTS WRITING

Agree – schools will no longer be needed in the modern world due to a huge amount of information on the internet

2) Online information is more trustworthy nowadays

- there are a lot of official courses which many institutions provide like distance learning, online courses, and so on. Contents in these courses are reliable and trustworthy.

IELTS WRITING

Agree – schools will no longer be needed in the modern world due to a huge amount of information on the internet

3) Parents can find information and use them to educate children by themselves

- this is becoming more common these days since the internet is available in any part of the world.

IELTS WRITING

Disagree – schools are still needed for children

1) Schools are places where children can improve themselves

- children can socialise with other peers, share ideas,
build relationships with friends and teachers, and so on.

IELTS WRITING

Disagree – schools are still needed for children

2) Children cannot manage their time efficiently yet

- schools have their own curriculums which make students attend classes regularly. This will help them to learn time management naturally.

IELTS WRITING

Disagree – schools are still needed for children

3) Children can learn a variety of subjects

- schools provide suitable curriculums with various subjects including mathematics, languages, science, and performing arts subjects. By learning these subjects, children can develop their thinking skills and knowledge.

IELTS WRITING2017년 12월 2일 문제 Sample answer*Introduction

It is considered that schools will become unnecessary as children can access any information which is available online and study through it. I strongly disagree with this view as I believe that children need to attend school to learn social skills as well as learning academic subjects.

Secondly, online information is more trustworthy nowadays. There are a lot of official courses which many institutions provide such as distance learning, online courses, and so on. Contents in these courses are reliable and people can obtain a great amount of knowledge and information. (95 words)

IELTS WRITING2017년 12월 2일 문제 Sample answer*Main body 2

However, I believe that schools are still needed for children. First and foremost, schools are places where children can improve themselves. In schools, students can socialise with other peers, share ideas, and interact with friends and teachers. This means that students can learn academic knowledge as well as developing their basic social ability.

In addition, schools help children to learn time management naturally. As they are young, the majority of them do not know how to manage their time. In this sense, schools provide a regular timetable and their own curriculums which make students attend classes without fail. (98 words)

IELTS WRITING2017년 12월 2일 문제 Sample answer*Conclusion

In conclusion, even though children can learn through the internet, I believe that schools are still important education providing institutions which will not become unnecessary. Thus, children should be encouraged to attend schools rather than studying through the internet. (39 words)
