Organised tours to remote places and communities are becoming more and more popular. Would it be a positive or negative development to local people and the environment?

IELTS WRITINGPositive development to local people and the environment

- It can be a chance to develop local economy

Communities in remote areas can expect the rise in sales figures in local shops as well as having more opportunities to develop their tourism industry.

IELTS WRITING

Positive development to local people and the environment

- Infrastructures in remote places can be improved

In order to attract more tourists, more facilities must be built in those areas which will enable local people to pursue more convenient lives.

IELTS WRITING

Negative development to local people and the environment

- The environment in remote places can be seriously harmed by human activities

As the environment in those areas is vulnerable and fragile, it can be easily damaged if the number of people increases.

IELTS WRITING

Negative development to local people and the environment

- Local people may suffer from various pollution

Soil and water in remote places may be polluted due to rubbish which tourists create, and noise pollution may become more severe if transportations are operated within the area.

IELTS WRITING2018년 4월 21일 문제 Sample answer*Introduction

The popularity of organised tours such as packaged tours and guided tours to remote areas is growing rapidly in these days. In perspectives of local people and the environment of those places, I believe that this development is mainly detrimental. (40 words)

IELTS WRITING2018년 4월 21일 문제 Sample answer*Main body 1

To begin with, organised tours in remote places can be a positive development for inhabitants and the environment. First and foremost, infrastructures in remote places can be improved. It is obvious that many facilities are likely to be built in these areas in order to attract more tourists, and it will enable local people to live more conveniently with developed facilities.

IELTS WRITING2018년 4월 21일 문제 Sample answer*Main body 2

However, I opine that this development cannot be positive in all aspects. First of all, the environment in remote areas can be seriously harmed by human activities. As the environment in those areas is vulnerable and fragile, it can be easily damaged if the number of people increases. It can even cause some negative effects on a distinct eco-system of the areas.

IELTS WRITING2018년 4월 21일 문제 Sample answer*Main body 2

Moreover, local people may suffer from various pollution. Soil and water in remote places may be polluted due to rubbish which tourists create, and noise pollution may become more severe if transportation is operated within the area. These kinds of pollution may undermine local people's quality of life. (110 words)

IELTS WRITING2018년 4월 14일 문제 Sample answer*Conclusion

In conclusion, although organised tours can bring about many positive effects to remote areas, I believe that this development can be mainly detrimental. Thus, travelling to those areas should be controlled with a proper standard. (35 words)
