When designing buildings, the intended use of buildings should be taken into account rather than the outer appearances. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Agree 입장

- the function of building is more important than its appearance.

- For people's convenience

Functionality of buildings is important as it provides great convenience to people who work or live in there. Facilities which buildings contain would help people to pursue convenient lives.

Agree 입장

- the function of building is more important than its appearance.

- Buildings should meet users' various needs

In order to fulfill users' needs, buildings' functions should be considered most importantly. For example, rather than making buildings look nicer, facilities such as a good lighting system, a wide walkway, and other facilities for practical use should be considered as a priority.

Disagree 입장

- the outer appearance of buildings should not be ignored

- Uniquely designed buildings have a huge commercial value

These buildings can contribute in economy boost in the area since they can be famous among locals and tourists.

Disagree 입장

- the outer appearance of buildings should not be ignored

- Some buildings represent history and culture of a nation

It is necessary to look beautiful for some buildings since it was built to show a certain country's culture and custom.

Main body 1

To begin with, the outer appearance of buildings should not be ignored when designing buildings. Firstly, uniquely designed buildings have a huge commercial value. These buildings can contribute to the economy in the area since they can attract many locals and tourists. If people visit the area to see certain buildings, the local economy can be boosted as people will spend some money in the area.

2018년 3월 10일 문제 Sample answerMain body 1

Moreover, some buildings represent history and culture of a nation. To be specific, the buildings which show a certain country's culture and custom should look beautiful necessarily. For example, many temples or traditional palaces are built outstandingly in order to show the cultural value of nations. (112 words)

2018년 3월 10일 문제 Sample answerMain body 2

However, I believe that buildings' functions are more important than appearances. First and foremost, buildings should meet users' various needs. It is undeniable that buildings should be built to fulfill users' needs and every building is built for its practical use. For example, rather than making buildings look nicer, facilities such as a good lighting system, a wide walkway, and other facilities should be equipped by considering the functions of buildings carefully.
